After completing my chief residency at UCSF in 1999, I joined the UCSF Hospitalist Faculty. After several years of teaching UCSF medical students and residents on the wards and in urgent care, I became the Associate Program Director of the Internal Medicine residency at CPMC. I joined Kaiser Oakland and after a total of 7 years in Associate Program Director roles became the Residency Program Director in 2009. In the 10-plus years since I completed residency, my common professional theme has always been my passion for teaching clinical medicine, watching for those "lightbulb moments" in students and residents that remain my main inspiration as a clinician-educator.

I view the responsibility I have to my residents and to the program as my primary career focus. Our mission is to create outstanding and well-rounded internists, individuals who will be lifelong practitioners of the art and science of medicine. By taking a personal interest in every resident, I hope to allow resident physicians the opportunity to fully realize their professional goals. To accomplish this, our program prioritizes educational experiences over rotations that merely fulfill service obligations to a medical center, and includes a diversity of experiences from outpatient and inpatient medicine and its subspecialties, to specialized curricula in Evidence-Based Medicine, Quality Improvement, Global Health, Community Outreach, and Research. I believe an "Academic" program is defined not by a university title, but by the approach to every day clinical practice the Residency Program instills in its residents.
